Dimension of the Visual

XI-XV Centuries	The fact that what was conceived as 'writing' by pre-Colombian civilizations —Nahuatl and Inca mostly— was grounded in graphism ('pictographic writing')	Graphical/Visual dimension of writing Non-Western perspective
XVI-XVIII centuries	The fact that the Iberian conquest was having the writing as the most powerful instrument of 'civilization' in two way: (i) as instrument of administration and government (from Catholic Kings to Felipe II) and as instrument of knowledge and God (Jesuits approach, scientific approach)	Alphabetical dimension of writing Western perspective
XIX-XXI centuries	The fact that it is almost impossible nowadays to image other culture different than one grounded in a visual dimension.	Visual dimension of writing together with 'alphabetical' sense of knowledge Western perspective/Reformulation of non-Western perspective Mutual transculturalization
